VOLKSWAGEN T2 VAN

Looking to extend their range of vehicles in the late 1940s, Volkswagen came up with the idea of creating a light transporter van using the existing platform and engine of the Type 1 Beetle. The first initial designs placed the driver at the very front and envisioned a payload of 690 kg (1,520 lb.).

After building a number of prototypes and tweaking the concept, the first VW Type 2 rolled off the Wolfsburg production line in March 1950. The second generation of the Type 2 followed in 1967.

THE COUNTERCULTURE ICON

With its low cost and easy maintenance, plus its ability to comfortably move large groups of people or equipment, the VW Type 2 soon became popular with 1960s countercultures. The van's design was simple but spacious, which meant it was big enough to live in whilst travelling long distances. The Type 2 quickly became a common sight at music festivals and surfing beaches, often decorated with extravagant designs in bright colours.

THE LEGO® VERSION OF THE CLASSIC VOLKSWAGEN T2 CAMPERVAN AIMS TO REPRODUCE AS MANY OF THE FEATURES AND FUNCTIONS OF THE ORIGINAL VEHICLE AS POSSIBLE . . . BUT ALSO ADDS IN A FEW SURPRISES!

LEGO® VOLKSWAGEN

This new model is the latest in a series of past and present LEGO® sets celebrating a longstanding history between the two companies. The first pre-moulded VW models arrived in the 1950s, predating even the LEGO System itself. They were followed by iconic Volkswagen vehicles like the Type 1 Beetle in 2008 and 2016 and the original "split-screen" T1 Autocamper from 2011.

FROM THE DESIGN TEAM

As both a huge VW T2 fan and a seasoned LEGO® designer, Sven Franic managed to combine two of his biggest passions in this project: "I've owned several classic Volkswagens in my life. There is something unequivocally positive about the driving experience of these vehicles."

For Sven, the biggest challenge was designing all the model's opening functions to work together: "The Campervan is basically a multi-tool on wheels, everything opens in its own direction which meant that designing different hinge mechanisms demanded a little more thought on this model."

As early as the 1950s what would later become the Town Plan theme mixed LEGO® elements with VW pre-moulded car models.

The Volkswagen Beetle set from 2008 was the first large-scale car model under the Creator sculpture line. It was chosen after fans were polled on a choice of four potential car models.

A 4x4 version of the T2 Van was developed, but never made it into production. The technology was adopted by the T3 model called "Syncro".

After production of the VW T2 stopped in 1979 to make way for the new T3 model, the T2 design stayed in production in Brazil until as late as 2013.

The rear bench seat on camping versions of the vehicle could be converted into a sleeping position. This is known as a "rock and roll" bed.

While most VW vans had the sliding door on the passenger side, a version with the door on both sides was available. They were mostly used as fire engines and for mail delivery.
